Coiffures Can Cure Blues
Says Hollywood Dance Star

A new coiffure, as every woman knows, is far more than a way of dress the hair. It can also be a celebration, a cure for the blues, a salute to a new conquest, or a grand gesture "just because." A new hair style tried day before yesterday never prevents further research today.

For new coiffures, each of them a satisfactory answer to such hair style problems, are introduced by Ginger Rogers in RKO Radio's "Follow the Fleet" in which she is costarred with Fred Astaire. The coiffures were created by Mel Bern, head of the make-up department at the studio.

One of these four new styles is a variation of the coronet coiffure. The hair is parted on the left, brushed smooth across the crown of the head, the ends curled into tiny flat ringlets. Similar ringlets are set high on each side, over the ears.

Doesn't Like the Short Skirt

Although fashion trends are tending toward shorter skirts, Daniel L. Cowdell, a New York fashion designer, is not prepared to fight the trend with all his might.

"I have my mind extremely short skirts will be back before long, for fashion, like so many other things, run in cycles, and it's just about time for short skirts to start creeping back. And the average woman will probably start wearing them with just as much enthusiasm as she takes up any new fashion."

There was never any more idea than that the short skirt was those post-war short dresses with the extremely long-waisted effect. Now, however, further, that even if it is a short skirt, it comes into the fashion picture, as seen in the picture of Miss Rogers, Anne Harding, Barbara Stanwyck, and other actresses. And the average woman will probably start wearing them with just as much enthusiasm as she takes up any new fashion.

REPORTER PHOTOGRAPHERS, hundreds of them, will make a news highlight more real... more interesting... more understandable. The single, business-like click of a camera and a thousand-word story is captured, all in an instant, to be presented in a manner more graphic than the words themselves could ever attain.

The scenes these men photograph number into the thousands daily. From this great number a careful selection is made. The chosen pictures, designed to aid you in an instant, to be presented in a manner more graphic than the words themselves could ever attain.

This is our answer to a modern public's demand upon a modern newspaper for pictures of places, persons and incidents of world-wide importance.
